Yangon-Kawthaung-Yangon

Myanmar: Myanmar's Mergui Archipelago in the Andaman Sea (Burma) has over 800 tropical islands, covering an area of over 10,000 square kilometres. Until 1996, this authentic place was closed to the outside world for more than 50 years, countless uninhabited islands, virgin beaches, lakes and waterfalls. It is also one of the few remaining untouched areas on Earth because of their isolation. The islands and surrounding seas are alive with the fantastic diversity of wildlife, young and old, hard corals, soft and massive sponges. The vast includes giant groupers, all kinds of fish aggregation, various species of sharks, regular observations of a large number of stingrays. The macro life is present; sea horses, pipefish and much more rare ghost are the inhabitants of the archipelagos.
